Auditor uneasy of council donations

Winnipeg in the minority. Review the policy of permitting contributions from city councillors' expense accounts, report says

JOHN TOWNS

winnipeg@metronews.ca

A report by Winnipeg's auditor is suggesting bringing an end to city councillors' ability to make charitable donations out of their office budgets.

They are currently allowed to make donations out of their Councillors' Representation Allowance (CRA) fund, but Winnipeg is part of a minority of jurisdictions that permit the practice, according to city auditor Brian Whiteside.

He said his office has recommended that council's governance committee re-evaluate the current policy

Policies elsewhere

- The councils of Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver, Halifax, the House of Commons and the Manitoba legislature are among the governing bodies that don't allow their representatives to make charitable donations from their office expense accounts.
- Ottawa limits donations to 3.5 per cent (or about $8,500) of councillors' annual allowance, and Hamilton allows donations only in lieu of flowers in the event of a funeral.

when it next meets in September.

"Our recommendation is basically that when they're reviewing the policy, they should look at if there should be limits on donations or whether there should be an elimination of them altogether as an allowable expense," said Whiteside, who noted that Ottawa and Hamilton allow charitable donations from council office budgets, but there are strict limits placed on them.

Coun. Harvey Smith sits on the governance committee and said he'd be staunchly against disallowing charitable donations from the CRA, noting that the ability to pass out discretionary funds "cuts through the red tape" for smaller projects.

"I want more authority for the city councillors to act on behalf of the residents of their wards," he said. "I like a system that gives a ward councillor the ability to take on projects within their ward that they couldn't go to council for."

While Smith didn't have an exact figure available for how much of his CRA he's doled out for community projects, he said it was low compared to other councillors.

Aiming for 50 per cent

RCMP hopes to attract more women to force

As part of a national push to increase the number of women in their ranks, Mounties in Manitoba held a recruiting lunch in Winnipeg Thursday to give prospective officers the chance to meet and speak to female officers.

"It is targeted toward females, but definitely anyone who is interested in a career with the RCMP are absolutely more than welcome to attend," said Const. Izza Mian, a member of the RCMP's recruiting unit in Manitoba.

"We're looking at increasing our female membership within the RCMP, just to better represent the communities that police."

Currently about 20 per cent of the RCMP's numbers nationwide are women, and the force would like to improve that number to 50 per cent over the next 25 to 30 years. The force aims to hire 2,000 new officers over the next two years, and hopes about 38 per cent of those new recruits will be women.

"We have over a 150 areas of specialization.... and they're all absolutely open to women," said Mian.

The lunch came as the force faces a large class action lawsuit from former and current female members alleging widespread harassment within the ranks of the RCMP.

Also on Thursday Chief Supt. Louise LaFrance became only the second woman in the force's history to take charge of the RCMP's cadet training facility in Regina.

Delays. Bike swiped from man on cross-Canada tour for charity

Winnipeg police are hoping to reunite a bike with its owner so they can continue their cross-Canada fundraising ride.

Police said the touring bike, with a dark blue frame, silver accents and "Napoli" written on the frame, was stolen on Wednesday at 10:30 p.m. from the 800 block of Leila Avenue.

The bike's owner, Anas Cheema, an international student from Pakistan

Paracon 2013. They ain't afraid of no ghosts

Ghosts, UFOs, psychics, and all the things that go bump in the night are on the agenda for the city's first paranormal convention set to haunt the Marlborough Hotel this weekend.

A dozen speakers are lined up to give presentations at Winnipeg Paracon 2013, and despite some of the spine chilling topics on tap — and a midnight séance scheduled to take place in the nearly 100-year-old hotel's basement — organizer Sharon Granger tells Metro the event shouldn't creep anyone out too much.

The speakers — including

Door-to-door drive kicks off

Easy-peasy. Donations to be matched pound for pound

JOHN TOWNS

winnipeg@metronews.ca

No hanger? No problem

- You can drop off donations on July 21 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 700 London St., 505 Academy Rd., 45 Dalhousie Dr., and 807 Setter St.

Winnipeg Harvest is kicking off a summer food drive that will see volunteers heading door-to-door to pick up donations from over 60,000 homes next week.

This is the eighth time Harvest has partnered with local Latter-day Saints church members for the Annual Latter-day Saints Summer Food Drive, which has collected over 108 thousand kilograms of food over the last seven years.

Among those Latter-day Saints members is 15-year-old Belle DeGuzman, who has been involved in the drive for the past four years, along with the rest of her family.

"It became something I really enjoy doing," she said, adding that summer is one of the times when donations are needed the most.

"I find that at like Christmas time a lot of people donate, but sometimes the summer months get forgotten."

DeGuzman and other volunteers will spend from July 15 to 19 going door-to-door dropping off 60,000 paper door hangers listing the top ten items needed by Harvest. If they receive a door hanger, people are asked to leave a non-perishable food item on their front steps on Saturday, July 20, when crews will make the rounds picking up the items between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The donations are then matched pound-for-pound by Canada Safeway and Peak of the Market.

Belle DeGuzman, a soon-to-be Grade 11 student at J.H. Bruns Collegiate, holds up one of the door hangers that will be left on 60,000 doorknobs to solicit donations for Winnipeg Harvest. JOHN TOWNS/FOR METRO

If this is your first year heading up to the Winnipeg Folk Festival, here's a list of things you'd best leave at home if you want to fit in with the crowds at the festival's 40th anniversary this weekend.

SHANE GIBSON
shane.gibson@metronews.ca

Gangsta rap

This one's a fo' shizzle. Even if the only way you can fall asleep at night is by listening to the soothing sounds of Dr. Dre, Eazy-E and Flavor Flav, leave that stuff at home for this one and try kickin' a beat with bongos instead.

things not to bring to the Winnipeg Folk Festival

Shirt and shoes

While the combination of no shirt and no shoes will certainly get you refused service at most reputable businesses outside the festival grounds, the comfortable fashion statement is a must for getting good service at the food stands, artisan shops and beer gardens at the Winnipeg Folk Festival.

Homework

Even if you have some serious papers due for your summer classes, don't even think of trying to get it done between shows. It just won't happen, trust us, we've tried. Either get it done beforehand, or show your professor your sunburn on Monday — if he or she is the same shade of red, they'll understand.

Snowsuit

Sure the weather in Manitoba can be hard to predict, but we at Metro are prepared to do what the other media is too nervous to do: We are guaranteeing you will have no need for your winter gear at this year's festival. It's a brave move, we know. You're welcome.

Long face

Nothing sticks out more amongst the big goofy grins that walk around all over the Folk Fest grounds than a Gloomy Gus. So leave your sourpusses at home. And don't worry if you accidentally forget, smiling is extremely contagious all weekend.

winnipeg@metronews.ca

A celebration of Caribbean music, the Soca Reggae Festival goes tonight, Saturday and Sunday in Old Market Square.

The eighth annual event offers a mix of reggae, calypso, dancehall and soca sounds, from local acts like Voice of Boom, Paradize Band and Casimiro Nhussi to international artists like Jamaican reggae singer Junior Kelly.

"We were lucky to get Junior Kelly. We caught him on tour. It'll be his first time ever in Winnipeg," says DJ Vibesman, a Trinidad-born DJ/musician and the host of Island Vibes on CKUW.

"We're also bringing in Anslem Douglas, a soca, calypso, R&B performer. He's been around for over 20 years in Trinidad and the Caribbean carnival scene. The song Who Let the Dogs Out? is his song. He was the actual composer of the song. It's really awesome to have him on board this year."

Other names of note include DJ Bunny, calypso soca singer Enigma, dancehall reggae performer Kid Adoja Kapone and Cilly Cyb Fung High, a local group Vibesman describes as "psychedelic dub reggae."

Vibesman says Soca Reggae Festival is a great celebration of Caribbean culture and encourages anyone to attend, even if you don't know the difference between The Wailers and The Wailing Souls.

"Come on down. You have to come and hear it," Vibesman says.

Admission to the Soca Reggae Festival is $7, or $10 after 8 p.m. Children under 12 get in free.

Hydro line granted licence

A controversial plan to build a hydro transmission line on the west side of Lake Winnipeg has cleared a hurdle.

The province's Clean Environment Commission recommended Thursday that the province grant the project a licence — with some conditions.

"The commission recommends that a number of conditions be attached to this licence in order to provide some assurance that the goals of the Bipole III project can be met without compromising the environment of Manitoba," the commission's report stated.

Manitoba Hydro must improve its consultation process, as well as environmental assessment and monitoring activities, the commission said. Proper monitoring of the effects of construction, operation and maintenance of the project will help ensure that potential problems can be nipped in the bud, the commission said.

JOE LOFARO
Metro in Ottawa

Following an incident where one its employees in Kemptville, Ont., was fired after confronting a customer who left his dog in a car on a hot morning, Walmart Canada says it will install signs in its parking lots across Canada warning shoppers about the dangers of leaving children and pets in hot vehicles.

Carla Cheney with her dog Chico
JOE MORIN/METROLAND NEWS SERVICE

Walmart Canada issued a statement on its Facebook page just before noon Thursday saying that it is a major supporter of animal rights, and denying the termination was over the employee's move to confront the customer.

"We want you to know that the associate in question was absolutely not let go for trying to help a dog in a locked car. The decision to dismiss an associate is one that we take extremely seriously and must follow a comprehensive process," the statement said. "As per our protocol, the store manager did speak to the customer in question about the dangers of leaving a dog in a hot car."

The former employee, Carla Cheney, a pharmacy technician, said she called police Tuesday when she saw a man leave his dog in a truck in the parking lot. She said the SPCA had advised her to call 911 after a similar incident that happened at the store a week earlier.

Train engineer a hero or criminal?

Lac-Mégantic disaster.

Man hailed for valiant actions now suspended and under suspicion

His face gripped with terror, the train driver sprang out of bed at the inn where he'd retired for the night and raced to the scene of an impending catastrophe.

Residents of Lac-Mégantic, Que., painted a portrait Thursday of the friendly railman who chatted with locals during his

Returning home

Another 600 residents are being allowed home. A civil security spokeswoman said that means only about 200 people of 2,000 who were forced out won't be back home as of Friday.

Leave him alone

"I imagine it's not his fault. In the meantime, he needs support — he doesn't need harassment.... And if it's his fault, listen, he will pay for it, for sure."

Taxi driver Andre Turcotte, who has transported engineer Tom Harding from the train to the inn once or twice a week for the past four months.

regular stopovers in town.

An employee at the inn says she thinks she was looking into his eyes the instant he realized his crude-oil-filled train slammed into the downtown.

The train driver, Tom Harding, now finds himself at the centre of the investigation into a derailment disaster now feared to have killed 50 people.

His boss has said he could face criminal charges.

The chairman of the rail company has suspended Harding without pay amid concerns that he might not have properly applied the brakes.

The company had initially described Harding as a hero for apparently rushing to the scene, where he managed to pull some of the explosive rail cars away from the flames.

A taxi driver met Harding on Friday night at the spot where he parked the train before it roared into town. He said his regular customer seemed fine.

However, Andre Turcotte did say that the train appeared to be belching out more smoke than usual, so much so that he recalled oil droplets from the exhaust landing on his car.

Turcotte said his client calmly assured him that he had followed company directives to deal with the problem.

Oath to the Queen of Canada 'repulsive'

Citizenship. Would-be Canadians challenge requirement to pledge allegiance to Elizabeth

Forcing would-be Canadians to pledge allegiance to the Queen before they can become citizens is discriminatory and a violation of their rights, three permanent residents are set to argue in court on Friday.

The Citizenship Act requires applicants for citizenship to swear or affirm they will be "faithful and bear true allegiance to Queen Elizabeth the Second, Queen of Canada, her heirs and successors."

The requirement "effectively bars" the applicants from enjoying citizenship rights such as voting or obtaining a Canadian passport given their constitutionally protected beliefs, their application to Ontario Superior Court states.

Michael McAteer, one of three disgruntled would-be citizens.
CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the applicants, Michael McAteer, says his father was persecuted in Ireland for supporting Irish independence.

"Taking an oath of allegiance to a hereditary monarch who lives abroad would violate my conscience," McAteer says.

Simone Topey says swearing allegiance to the Queen — whom Rastafarians regard as the "head of Babylon" — would violate her beliefs.

Dror Bar-Natan maintains the Queen is a symbol of entrenched privilege and taking the oath would be "repulsive."

For its part, the federal government argues that the three are in Canada voluntarily, and their political and religious views enjoy constitutional protections.

That they cannot have the "convenience" of a Canadian passport or the right to vote is a small price to pay for adhering to their principles.

"It is not constitutionally inconsistent that the applicants who find Canada's foundational democratic political structure to be 'repugnant,' at least in parts, are not accorded the right to vote within that political system," it states.

"The inability to enjoy the benefits of citizenship ... are amongst the costs reasonably borne by individuals whose personal beliefs run counter to Canada's foundational heritage." THE CANADIAN PRESS

409 buried at Bosnian massacre memorial

Srebrenica. Muslim town saw execution of 8,372 men and boys under Gen. Ratko Mladic

Hava Muhic stood Thursday above the smallest pit in the cemetery, near her husband's grave. It was dug for her baby girl — who was born and died here 18 years ago on the day of the worst massacre Europe has seen since World War II.

Muhic's baby is among the remains of 409 people recently identified after being found in mass graves, who were re-buried at the Potocari Memorial Center on the anniversary of the Srebrenica massacre. This year's commemorations bring the total of identified victims to 6,066. Another 2,306 remain missing.

Muhic is burying the daughter she never had a chance to see or call by name.

A marker above the coffin says: Newborn Muhic (father Hajrudin) 11.07.1995 — the date marking birth and death.

Muhic blames her child's death on the frantic rush to seek safety among U.N. peacekeepers as Bosnian Serbs overran the town. A woman who helped her give birth in the U.N. compound told her the girl was born with the umbilical cord wrapped around her neck and that she was dead.

Back then, Srebrenica was a U.N.-protected Muslim town in Bosnia besieged by Serb forces throughout the country's 1992-95 war. Serb troops led by Gen. Ratko Mladic broke into the enclave on July 11, 1995.

Myanmar. Twenty-five Buddhists sentenced to jail for role in deadly riot

Sectarian clash

Buddhist mobs torched Mingalar Zayone Islamic Boarding School, Muslim businesses and all but one of the city's 13 mosques following a dispute between a Muslim and a Buddhist at a gold shop and the burning death of a Buddhist monk by four Muslim men.

Twenty-five Buddhists were sentenced to as many as 15 years in prison for murder and other crimes during a night of rioting, burning and killing in central Myanmar, following weeks in which it seemed only Muslims were being punished for sectarian violence aimed primarily at members of their own religion.

But the sentences issued Wednesday and Thursday did not erase a sense of unequal justice: A day earlier, a Muslim received a life sentence for murdering one of the 43 people killed March 20 and 21 in the central Myanmar town of Meikhtila.

A wave of violence over the past year in this predominantly Buddhist Southeast Asian country has left more than 250 people dead and 140,000 others fleeing their homes, most of them Muslim. The attacks, and the government's inability to stop them, have marred the Southeast Asian country's image abroad as it moves toward democracy and greater freedom following nearly five decades of military rule.

Most of the sentences were handed down Wednesday, and the toughest stemmed from the deadliest incident of the Meikhtila riots: A brutal mob attack on an Islamic school, its students and teachers that killed 36 people.

Judge orders halt to detainee genital searches

A U.S. judge Thursday ordered the government to stop genital searches of Guantanamo Bay detainees who want to meet with their lawyers, concluding that the motivation for the searches is not to enhance security, but to deter the detainees' access to attorneys.

Royce Lamberth, chief judge of the U.S. District Court in Washington, ordered prison commanders to return to the old search method: Grasping the waistband of a detainee's trousers and shaking the pants to dislodge any contraband.

Insurgent attacks kill 31, deepen religious divide

Insurgents in Iraq launched two days of bloody assaults at the start of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan that killed at least 31 people, authorities said Thursday.

The killings are the latest in a wave of bloodshed that has claimed the lives of more than 2,600 people since the start of April. The months-long eruption of violence is raising fears the country is again returning to the brink of a civil war pitting its Sunni and Shiite Muslim sects against one another.

Top court to hear cell privacy case

Ottawa. Man arrested for armed robbery says police breached his rights by examining his phone

The Supreme Court of Canada is taking on the question of whether police can access information on a cellphone that isn't protected by a password.

The court has agreed to hear an appeal from Kevin Fearon, who was arrested after an armed robbery in Toronto in 2009.

Police obtained photos of a gun and cash, as well as a text message about jewelry, after taking a closer look at Fearon's phone, which was unlocked. After he was convicted, Fearon appealed, arguing that police breached his rights when they examined the phone after his arrest.

The Ontario Court of Appeal said it was all right for the police to look through the phone in a cursory fashion

No explanation

- As usual, the Supreme Court justices gave no reasons for agreeing to hear the case.
- Kevin Fearon also appealed over the issue of access to a lawyer, saying he was left in an interview room for five hours without an opportunity to contact counsel.
- The Supreme Court, however, said the appeal will be limited to the cellphone issue.

to see if there was evidence relevant to the crime, but after that they should have stopped to get a search warrant.

Had the phone been password-protected or otherwise locked to anyone other than its owner, "it would not have been appropriate" to look through the phone without a search warrant.

The appeal judges referred to a decision in a murder case in which the judge did not allow evidence from a personal electronic device because it "functioned as a mini-computer," which has a high expectation of privacy.

The contents of that device were only extracted by a police officer using specialized equipment, the judges noted.

"There was no suggestion in this case that this particular cellphone functioned as a 'mini-computer,' nor that its contents were not 'immediately visible to the eye,'" the court said in its ruling.

"Rather, because the phone was not password-protected, the photos and the text message were readily available to other users."

Defence lawyer Sean Robichaud said that approach failed to take into account the amount of information many people keep on their cellphones these days.

Royal-kid kitsch. Souvenir makers ready for mad dash

Souvenir plates to mark the forthcoming birth of a baby for Prince William and his wife Kate, Duchess of Cambridge, stand on display in a shop in central London on Wednesday. SANG TAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a royal bonanza — but for Britain's souvenir makers, also a royal headache. The upcoming birth of Prince William and his wife Kate's first child is a golden opportunity that comes with a mystery: The name and gender of the baby.

While merchants have known for months that the future heir to the throne is due in mid-July, they'll be sent into a mad dash to create, or at least put finishing touches on, royal baby memorabilia.

Sophie Allport, a designer of fine bone china, is one manufacturer waiting for the future monarch's name to send her commercial plans into motion. She has thousands of pre-orders for hand-crafted commemorative mugs but can't fill them until the baby's name can be etched on the rims.

She's as ready as she can possibly be — having prepared both blue and pink designs depending on whether it's a prince or princess. "We've never done something like this so I hope it works," said Allport, whose designs, once finished, will be scanned, mailed or even driven by courier to the city of Stoke-on-Trent, the centre of Britain's ceramic industry.

Toronto team takes international prize

Two Toronto engineers have just finished setting up their prize-winning helicopter that is powered by Todd Reichert's powerful legs pedalling a bicycle.

Since 1980, a challenge to engineers across the world — to build a human-powered helicopter, capable of sustaining three metres of flight for 60 seconds — had remained unclaimed.

Teams of engineers from Japan to the U.S. came close, but not close enough. Only Reichert's team has fulfilled the seemingly impossible feat, earning it a $250,000 prize Thursday. The award-winning flight took place in June, after 18 months for the University of Toronto alumni to build and fine tune the project. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Synopsis

Grown Ups 2 picks up where the last movie left off. Lenny (Adam Sandler in his first ever sequel) has relocated his wife (Salma Hayek) and kids back to his hometown to be closer to friends and family. It's the last day of school, and as the kids are packing up their books, their fathers (Kevin James, Chris Rock, David Spade) grapple with growing up, growing old and a gang of frat boys (lead by Twilight's Taylor Lautner) who think the four old friends are way over the hill.

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Adam Sandler's comedy Grown Ups 2 opens this weekend. HANDOUT

It's more number two than it is number one

New movie. In the sequel to Grown Ups, the comedy doesn't grow into anything and remains a series of juvenile jokes and potty humour

Richard: Mark, the old saying, "They got bigger, but they didn't grow up," perfectly applies to this new Sandler and Company movie. It's 90 minutes of middle-aged men, urination gags (too many to count) and cleavage shots. So while the actors may have matured (chronologically at least) the jokes haven't. Question is: is it funny? I didn't really think so, although I have to say Shaquille O'Neal's big-guy-Andre-the-Giant shtick made me laugh. You?

Mark: No, I didn't laugh. But let's examine the inventory. Chris Rock may be the funniest stand-up working today, but as a movie star, he's never done anything much worthwhile.

David Spade: Tommy Boy was a long time ago.

Sandler: Well, I only find him funny when he's trying to be serious.

There is only one movie genius here — I'm not kidding — and it's Kevin James. He's the only one of the bunch that can convincingly play a regular guy and not come off like a slumming millionaire. And even then, not in this turkey.

Also you might have to wonder about any sequel that Rob Schneider passes on.

RC: I wondered where Schneider's character was. I guess some friendships don't last forever. I can't say I didn't laugh at all.

James' deadpan dumb kid who can't add or spell is a pretty funny running gag but for a movie about growing up, it was all so juvenile. I didn't expect a searing meditation on aging but I did think they might touch on the fact that they were growing old with more smarts than lines like, "I used to buy 10 cases of beer for my parties, now I get 10 cases of juice boxes."

MB: A good line. I snorted in recognition. And I grudgingly laughed a bit at a few sight gags, like the exploding life raft and some of the '80s outfits at the party finale. But generally, the humour aims too low. But I liked it — if I can use the word — more than the first one. At least it had some nice callbacks and weird twists of coincidence. And it had a lazy summer quality about it, probably the result of lazy screenwriting, acting and direction.

RC: I like silly movies, I just wish it was silly and about something other than a moose urinating on Sandler's unsuspecting family, and by extension, the audience.

MB: We should all feel lucky. In the first draft of the script, it was the other way around.

Comic-Con. The annual event showcases the latest in film, TV and general geekery

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

July means one thing for the entertainment industry: Comic-Con. Here's what we're geeking out over this year at the annual pop culture smorgasbord in San Diego.

IN FILM

Marvel: The comic book movie juggernaut never ceases to impress in San Diego, and hopefully this year will be no different. We're looking for updates on Avengers 2 as well as the upcoming Captain America and Thor sequels. Plus, wouldn't it be awesome if they brought out the whole cast of Guardians of the Galaxy, their bizarre new super-team movie?

X-Men: Days of Future Past: It feels like it's been forever since Fox has mounted a Hall H presentation for Comic-Con, but this year they're back. Mum is the word on what will be presented, but we have it on good authority something will be done to celebrate the impending release of the Wolverine. More importantly, we're hoping for an update from Bryan Singer on his return to the X-Men franchise.

Godzilla: With Pacific Rim putting giant, city-destroying monsters back in people's minds, the time is right to reintroduce the original kaiju, Godzilla. The reboot, starring Aaron Taylor-Johnson, Ken Watanabe and Elizabeth Olsen, has just started filming, so hopefully there will be some monster-sized surprises in store.

IN TV

Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D.: We may have to wait until summer 2015 for Avengers 2, but Marvel is helping make that wait go faster with this TV spin-off, overseen by Joss Whedon himself. It's easily our most anticipated show of the fall season. And maybe we'll finally learn how Clark Gregg's Agent Coulson — who appeared to have perished in the Avengers — factors into the new show.

Doctor Who: We're halfway through the venerable British sci-fi series' 50th anniversary, so expect big things — especially with current Time Lord Matt Smith bowing out later this year. That makes this his last Comic-Con as Doctor Who, so hopefully he'll make the most of it.

Hannibal: Fans of this dark and twisted drama had to wait a tortuously long time for NBC to give it a second season renewal — coming weeks after other series got the green light — so both fans and executive producer Brian Fuller have plenty of reason to celebrate at the show's first panel.

IN GENERAL GEEKERY

Nerd HQ: Chuck star Zachary Levi's Nerd Machine's, a party space devoted to all things nerdy, is back and moving to much bigger digs at Petco Park for a slew of dance parties, celebrity panels and gaming demos. Maybe next year they'll just take over the whole convention centre.

Wired Café: Wired magazine's Comic-Con oasis celebrates its fifth year of offering attendees a respite from the geeky madness with food, drink and gadgets galore. Though, given the level of treachery on the hit HBO series, maybe we'll skip the drinks at the Game of Thrones bar.

The costumes: Celebrities and major movies are nice and all, but what really makes Comic-Con special is the

What about Star Wars?

So fans of the Force will have to wait another month for news on the first of a new series of films in a galaxy far, far away...

A modern twist

Superheroines get a hipster makeover

Artist Elizabeth Beals (society6.com/ElizabethBealsPrints) is giving superheroines a modern look by turning them into their hipster selves. The illustrations of the DC female protagonists — Diana Prince (Wonder Woman), Harleen Quinzel (Harley Quinn) and Selina Kyle (Catwoman) — look like they would be at home in an episode of Girls. While to the naked eye they may seem like your average 20-something, little nods to their super personalities present a fun new take on these classic characters.

NED EHRBAR

When it comes to discussing contemporary horror movies, "restraint" isn't usually a word that comes up too often.

But it's one that actor Patrick Wilson keeps coming back to when describing how director James Wan (Saw, Insidious) approached The Conjuring, based on a case file by real-life paranormal investigators Ed Warren (Wilson) and Lorraine Warren (Vera Farmiga).

The irony doesn't escape Wilson that Wan is at least partially responsible for the current state of horror, but against that backdrop, The Conjuring — presented as if it were released during its early 1970s setting — is a throwback in the best possible way.

This movie is seriously terrifying.

Yeah, the movie's no joke. I watched it again last night, and my friend who was with me — who had also seen it with me before — jumped more this time than he did the other time. I kept looking over at him like, "But you know what's coming."

much in mood and style like a 1970s film.

James said that to me very early on. It was the '70s without hitting people over the head — with bell bottoms or an episode of Partridge Family or something. Yeah, it's in the '70s and you've got '70s clothes, and you've got the odd "groovy" that the kids say — which they would — and I think it gives people a little frame of reference, but it's not blatant.

It's refreshing to see the older style of making scary movies is still effective.

No disrespect to horror movies from the past 15 years, but when people say, "What are the great horror movies?" you're always drawn to the Exorcist — that movie always comes up as one of maybe three or four that are arguably the best. Those are movies that are rich in character and not overly graphic. The violence is used appropriately, the blood is used appropriately. And I think James has a real affinity for that, which I always admired, especially coming from Saw. He almost started this whole movement, I feel like, with the shock and the gore and everything. But one of the things that struck me about (our previous collaboration) Insidious was the complete opposite of that. And now he's just really hit his stride.

Pacific Rim

Director. Guillermo del Toro

Stars. Charlie Hunnam, Idris Elba, Rinko Kikuchi

• • • • •

Director Guillermo del Toro has made an end-of-the-world scenario fun. In Pacific Rim the planet is threatened by Kaijus, colossal beasts with an appetite for destruction. Giant robots called Jaegers, operated by pilots like Raleigh Becket (Charlie "Sons of Anarchy" Hunnam) are the last hope to fight the beasts and save the world. Add to that Ron Perlman in a colourful cameo, huge-scale martial arts and some crazy Roger Corman-esque science theories and you have a geek freak-out that transports you back in time to wherever you saw your first Godzilla movie. RICHARD CROUSE

Mos Def most definitely puts himself on the line with video

Guantanamo Bay. Human rights organization Reprieve started an initiative to raise awareness on force-feeding practices

Actor and rapper Yasiin Bey, better known as Mos Def, has tears in his eyes as he pleads for the men who are holding him down not to continue. The men make a move to reinsert a thin, plastic tube in his nostril, and he fights them despite being shackled. A man off camera finally yells for them to stop, and Bey breaks down.

The dramatic video, demonstrating how prisoners are force fed in Guantanamo Bay, lasts less than five minutes. In real life, the whole process lasts two hours and occurs twice a day, Cori Crider, human rights organization

Reprieve's strategic director, explained.

"The point of the video is to humanize their plight," Crider told Metro World News.

Reprieve, along with BAFTA-award winning director Asif Kapadia (Senna), created the video to bring awareness to the violations that many of the more than 100 protesters who are hunger striking at the detention centre are going through. The U.S. government has acknowledged that 45 prisoners are being force fed to prevent starvation.

The group approached Bey and explained that they were looking for a person in the public eye to show the brutal process.

"He's in sincere and pretty severe pain," Crider said. "Your throat tenses up when you are nervous. ... He said he thought it was one of the more important things he had been involved in."

No response

Reprieve hasn't received a response from the Obama administration.

- Quote. "I hope they treat it like an emergency situation soon because God knows what will happen," Crider stated.
- Watch. youtube.com/watch?v=4hQ5xz\_5to4 who has represented dozens of prisoners in the centre over the years, explained that the hunger strike started in February over many issues culminating in the burning of Quran books. However, she felt it had been long forgotten by the media.

What she and her team at Reprieve want is simple.

They want the U.S. government to stop the force feeding of prisoners during the daylight hours of Ramadan, which began on July 10.

They want medical professionals to stop administering Reglan, a medication prescribed for anti-vomiting and nausea in the U.S. that comes with a warning not to take it longer than 12 weeks.

They want prisoners to have the right to choose whether they want to protest and hunger strike, and not to be forced against their will to receive nutrients.

"I don't see any end in sight," she said.

Crider hopes that with the massive attention the video is getting, people will become passionate about the issue and join the fight.

At the very least, she hopes the U.S. government will understand that force feeding is not acceptable, and that they will transfer people who have been cleared by U.S. national security as not being terrorist threats. METRO

Daft Punk. Electronica duo joins a long list of artists who have partnered with condom brands to extend their reach

MICHELLE CASTILLO

Metro World News

If you're about to get lucky, Daft Punk wants to make sure you're protected. That's why the French duo has partnered with condom maker Durex to make Get Lucky condoms, named after the first single off of their latest album Random Access Memories.

Here's other celebrities who have mixed business with pleasure.

Ke$ha

During the singer's Get Sleazy tour, Ke$ha encouraged her fans to have some fun but stay safe when she shot hundreds of Lifestyle condoms featuring a picture of her face out of a cannon at her concerts.

JLS

The X-Factor boy group partnered with Durex for a Just Love Safe campaign in order to encourage safe sex behav-

our among their young fans. The four packages featured a different colour and picture of a JLS member.

Ludacris

While he didn't get his own condom, the rapper was the spokesperson for the Magnum Live Large Project, which honoured men with lyrical talent who used the extra-large sized condom.

Fans were encouraged to create Magnum-themed lyrics to a pre-recorded track, and the winner won $5,000, a chance to get their song played on national radio, a trip to an Atlanta hip-hop festival and the chance to be brought on stage during one of Ludacris' shows.

Lord of the Rings

We're pretty sure the LoTR-branded condoms aren't official. However, whoever owns the property rights to the series is probably kicking themselves for not putting that thou shalt not pass tagline on a rubber themselves.

Three tracks that should already be on your radar

9/Föllakzoid

I've seen this Chilean band's music described as "alternative cosmic trance." It sounds more like Krautrock to me, but whatever. This track from the album entitled II is a brilliant driving song.

Shark Attack (I Can See Them Circling)/The Mark Inside

Just as this Toronto band was about to release their new album, Dark Hearts Can Radiate White Light, singer and guitarist Chris Levoir passed away. The group is now giving away the entire record (which is very good) in his memory.

Delightfully F'd Up/Alex Silas

This singer/poet/MC/rapper from Ottawa makes a palatable smoothie out of indie rock, blues, electronic, folk and reggae.

'Humorous tribute' to Lionel Richie. Art collective makes giant head of singer and the best part is that it doubles as a bedroom

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News

Barcelona-based art collective Hungry Castle have found a novel way to pay tribute to classic soul singer Lionel Richie, building a five-metre inflatable sculpture of his head that plays his hit song Hello. The crew raised more than $15,000 to fund the project through Kickstarter, and Lionel will be touring festivals in the UK this summer and giving fans the opportunity to sleep inside. We talked to art director Killian Cooper.

With this massive head, are you saying that Lionel Richie is arrogant?
We're not criticizing him. The main inspiration was the end of the Hello music

Inside the head is a luxurious, romantic bedroom. BOTH PHOTOS HANDOUT video, which is a little disturbing when he is technically stalking a blind girl, who sculpts a bust of his head.

What impact will it have on people? Do you expect romance inside the head?
There are two Australian guys travelling from Melbourne who bid £1,000 to spend a night in the head. It will be full on luxury in there, decked out with champagne, so I expect romance. Maybe they will bring girls in or just get to know each other better. Festival-goers can be a rough crowd. Are you worried about vandalism?

Yes, there will always be people who want to attack that kind of thing, like mascots who wear bear outfits. We will have overnight security but I don't know if they would take a bullet for the head.

You're touring a lot of busy outdoor events. How about Tahrir Square?

Not sure about Egypt but I like the idea of travelling in different countries with it and it saying hello to people.

What other heads might you do?

This is it. We're focusing on Lionel Richie but doing other artistic projects with him — like a sculpture class with smaller heads. If I had to do another one? Mr T.

Is Lionel Richie going to sue you?

Well, new audiences are discovering his music so maybe he is grateful. He was interviewed about it so I think he sees it as a humorous tribute.

Low key wedding bells imminent for Berry

Halle Berry will reportedly marry her fiancé, Olivier Martinez, this weekend, according to E! News, though the location of the event is still a mystery. Berry and Martinez were spotted flying out of LAX earlier this week with Berry's daughter, Nahla, in tow. If Berry's interview with InStyle last year is any indication, it will be an intimate ceremony. "I do know it will be very small," she told the magazine. The couple, who have been engaged since March 2012, are expecting their first child together.

King of Queens star leaves Church of Scientology

MELINDA TAUB

Metro World News in New York City

King of Queens and The Talk star Leah Remini has left the Church of Scientology. Apparently Remini, who has been a member of the church for many years, grew tired of the organization's habit of cutting off ties with people it deems "suppressive."

"It all began when Leah questioned the validity of excommunication of people," a source told the Post. "She is stepping back from a regime she thinks is corrupt. She thinks no religion should tear apart a family or abuse someone under the umbrella of 'religion.'" Apparently, at Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes's wedding, the actress asked politely where church leader David Miscavige's wife was. It must have been a loaded question, because Remini was slammed with years of auditing and "thought modification." Remini is reportedly considering going public, but wants to wait and see what the church is going to do, since they're rumoured to harass those who try to leave.

Remini can stay at my place if she needs to hide out. I am a strong supporter of religious freedom for sitcom stars.

Angelina Jolie

War, what is it good for? An Angelina Jolie movie, apparently

Angelina Jolie has her second project as a director all lined up. The actress and activist will be taking on Unbroken, a Second World War drama about former prisoner of war Louie Zamperini, according to Yahoo News. "I've had the privilege of spending a great deal of time with Louie Zamperini, who is a hero of mine, and now — I am proud to say — a dear friend," Jolie says in a statement. "I am deeply honoured to be telling his extraordinary story, and I will do my absolute best to give him the film he deserves." Oscar-winners Joel and Ethan Coen are writing the script, and Jolie was spotted in Hawaii this week scouting locations. Jolie's first film as a director,

In the Land of Blood and Honey, was released in 2011.

A crispy nacho is a happy (tasty) nacho

Corn and Steak Grilled Nachos. When they're nuked in the microwave, these little guys die a soggy death. Save a nacho from this sad ending with your barbecue

Before turning on the grill, make sure the baking sheet you plan to use fits on it with the lid down. If it doesn't, you can divide the ingredients into multiple smaller pans. The smaller pans also can be cooked in batches, if needed.

1. In a medium bowl, whisk together the adobo sauce, tomato paste, oil, garlic powder and salt. Add the steak and mix to coat thoroughly. Cover and refrigerate for at least 20 minutes and up to overnight.

2. When ready to cook, heat the grill to medium-high.

3. Rub the corn with a bit of canola oil, then set it on the grill. Cook the corn, turning often, until lightly browned on all sides, about 2 to 3 minutes. Transfer the corn to a plate and set aside until cool enough to handle.

4. Meanwhile, use an oil-soaked paper towel held with tongs to coat the grill grates with oil. Add the steak and grill for 1 to 2 minutes per side, or to desired doneness. Transfer to a plate and set aside. Leave the grill on, but reduce the heat to low.

5. Arrange the tortilla chips in an even layer on a rimmed baking sheet. Spread the steak evenly over the chips.

6. Cut the corn kernels from the cobs. To do this, stand the ear on its wide end, then use a knife to saw down the length of the sides. Scatter the corn kernels over the steak and chips, then scatter the cheese over that. Set the baking sheet on the grill, cover the grill and cook for 7 to 10 minutes, or until the cheese is melted.

7. Remove the baking sheet from the grill, then scatter the tomatoes, pepperoncini and diced onion over the other toppings. Serve immediately.

Ingredients

- 3 tbsp adobo sauce (from a can of chipotle chilies in adobo)
- 3 tbsp tomato paste
- 3 tbsp canola, plus extra
- 1 tsp garlic powder
- 1 tsp kosher salt
- 9 oz beef sirloin, thinly sliced (can substitute pre-sliced "stir-fry" beef)
- 1 ear corn, husked
- 11-oz bag corn tortilla chips
- 1 cup grated cheddar cheese
- 1/2 pint cherry tomatoes, cut into quarters
- 1/3 cup pepperoncini, stemmed and thinly sliced
- 1/2 small red onion, diced

Liquid Assets

Staple of summertime

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Sorry, spirit fans, you don't have the monopoly on mixology. Innovative wine lovers have been adding extras to vino for centuries, creating inspired alternatives to drinking it neat.

The Spanish came up with the idea of sangria: A blend of red wine, liqueur and fruit named after their term for blood because of its dark colour. Arguably the first wine cooler, Canadians are just cluing in to how easy it is to make — not to mention how well it goes with summer menus.

My basic recipe is meant to be played with, so have fun experimenting. Use whatever fruit turns you on (I start with watermelon, blueberries and raspberries) and an inexpensive Spanish red or a value-priced, fruit-forward alternative like Lindeman's juicy 2012 Cawarra Shiraz Cabernet ($8.95 to $10.99) from Australia.

Peter's Simple Sangria:

- Ice cubes
- 750 ml chilled red wine
- 100 ml orange liqueur
- 500 ml gingerale
- 200 ml lemonade
- Fruit
- Sugar

Grab a clear glass pitcher and toss in some ice cubes. Add all the liquids, then the fruit. Stir. Give it a sip and add sugar to taste. Enjoy!

Bombers focused on details for Week 3

CFL. Club looking for offence to finally jell during Week 3 road trip

Winnipeg Blue Bombers coach Tim Burke is looking for his offence to click this weekend after a couple of uninspiring starts where the defence managed to shine brighter.

"I wasn't happy with their performance on the first days of practice but the last two days have been much better," Burke said on Thursday. "This is hopefully a game where we break out of our slump."

The Bombers (1-1) will meet the Hamilton Tiger-Cats (0-2) on Saturday in Guelph, Ont.

The defence was the cog that kept the wheels spinning in their first win of the season in Montreal last week. Turnovers and sacks sapped the momentum of quarterback Buck Pierce.

The official count was five sacks but offensive co-ordinator Gary Crowton says it was really only three.

"Two of those sacks were the run plays where the back went the wrong way or the quarterback on the exchange fumbled, so they count those as sacks," he said. "Anytime the quarterback gets a loss, they count it as a sack."

But five is what's on the record books and he says they have to live with that.

"It is what it is," Crowton said. "This week we're really focused on our technique. We've got a lot of ways to protect where we can mix it up sometimes."

Week 3 pick

Winnipeg (1-1) at Hamilton (0-2), Saturday night (5:30 p.m., TSN).

The Ticats play their second straight "home" game following Sunday's 30-20 loss to Edmonton in their first-ever game in Guelph, Ont. Hamilton QB Henry Turnovers have also plagued the Bomber offence. The first play of the first game was an interception thrown by Pierce.

The Bombers fought their way back from a 14-point deficit and led for a while before bowing out 38-33 to Montreal.

Crowton said he was happier with the start last week in Montreal, when the Bombers outscored the Alouettes 19-11, although turnovers were still an issue.

Burris is the CFL's passing leader with 595 yards, but faces a Winnipeg defence that continually harassed Anthony Calvillo last week. Andy Fantuz had 10 catches for 155 yards and a TD in the opener against Toronto but didn't play against the Eskimos due to injury.

Buck Pierce has thrown twice as many picks (four) as TDs (two) and has a less-than-stellar 58.5 per cent completion average. The Bombers have turned the ball over 10 times already this season.

Pick: Ticats

One of those three sacks, for example, was also a fumble.

"If you have mistakes you've got to put them behind you and move forward," Crowton said. "I think we've done that. Now we've got to not have those mistakes."

With Terrence Edwards out of the offence this week with a shoulder injury, Isaac Anderson is in at receiver and both Pierce and Burke say his speed will be an asset, particularly as a deep threat.

"Isaac is probably one of the fastest guys on the team," Burke said.

"Not having Terrence is tough because of his experience and his leadership," Pierce said of the dependable slotback.

Anderson started three games at slotback late last season as well.

"The expectation is high so we've got to meet it with intensity," he said, sweat running down his face after a strenuous practice that continued well after other players had left the field. "We've got to put some points on the board to help our defence now and then."

Stampeders-Alouettes

Als try to right ship after Week 2 loss to Bombers

Two potentially vulnerable teams clash Friday when the Calgary Stampeders visit the Montreal Alouettes.

The Alouettes are coming off a woeful 19-11 loss at home to Winnipeg last week that raised questions about whether the team is in sync with its new coaching staff.

Calgary blew a second-half lead to lose 36-21 to Saskatchewan last week and lost starting quarterback Drew Tate and a few players on defence to injury, making Kevin Glenn the starter against Montreal.

Both 1-1 teams will be looking to bounce back when they meet at Percival Molson Stadium.

The Alouettes hoped they got things sorted out in team meetings.

"We sat down, everybody talked and got everything off their chest," running back Brandon Whitaker said Thursday. "As professionals, we have to put out a better performance." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lions-Eskimos

Jackson's long wait almost over

Paris Jackson has no difficulty remembering the last time he started a CFL game.

It was in 2009.

Barring any unforeseen changes, he will finally start at slotback again Saturday as his B.C. Lions visit the Edmonton Eskimos.

"Man, I've been waiting for that for three years," Jackson, an 11-year veteran who has spent his entire career with the Lions, said after a practice this week.

"I'll be very emotional."

He is slated to replace Shawn Gore, who suffered a head injury in last week's win over Toronto.

In the past four seasons, Jackson, 32, has battled negative perceptions about his age and speed. The Vancouver native's career was first derailed by a wonky knee, before Lions general manager Wally Buono launched a youth movement in the receiving corps.

NHL. Russian sniper retires to return home; 12 years, $77M left on big contract

When the New Jersey Devils signed Ilya Kovalchuk to a contract that eventually became a 15-year deal worth $100 million US, it stunned the NHL.

But that was nothing compared to Kovalchuk's decision to retire and walk away from the final 12 years and $77 million of it.

Kovalchuk's announcement Tuesday to return home to Russia came several months after the superstar considered staying there in the wake of the NHL lockout. The 30-year-old said in a statement that he has thought for a long time about moving home for good.

"Though I decided to return this past season, (general manager Lou Lamoriello) was aware of my desire to go back home and have my family there with me," Kovalchuk said. "The most difficult thing for me is to leave the New Jersey Devils, a great

$77M left on the table

Here are the remaining yearly salary amounts Ilya Kovalchuk will be giving up:

2013-14: $11,300,000
2014-15: $11,300,000
2015-16: $11,600,000
2016-17: $11,800,000

2017-18: $10,000,000
2018-19: $7,000,000
2019-20: $4,000,000
2020-21: $1,000,000
2021-22: $1,000,000
2022-23: $1,000,000
2023-24: $3,000,000
2024-25: $4,000,000

organization that I have a lot of respect for, and our fans that have been great to me."

Kovalchuk had 417 goals and 399 assists in 816 games over 11 NHL seasons spent with the Atlanta Thrashers and Devils. He was the first-overall pick of the Thrashers in 2001 and was a face of that franchise before being traded to New Jersey in 2010.

"After many conversations with Ilya over the past year on his desire to retire from the National Hockey League, Ilya's decision became official today," Lamoriello said in a statement. "On behalf of the entire organization, I wish Ilya and his family all the best in their future endeavours."

Kovalchuk is free to play in Russia's KHL and reports from Russian news agencies indicated he will officially sign with SKA St. Petersburg on Friday.

Kovalchuk's original deal with the Devils was for 17 years and $102 million. It was ruled cap circumvention by the NHL because Kovalchuk would have been 44 years old when it was over.

The Devils must forfeit their 2014 first-round pick as punishment for the circumvention after they opted to keep their selections in 2012 and 2013. They will also be charged $250,000 against the salary cap through 2024-25 as a result of Kovalchuk's retirement.

Site connects athletes with dreams

Pursuit. Crowd-sourcing platform allows Canadian Olympians to get creative with fundraising efforts

Some Canadian athletes are funding the pursuit of their Olympic dreams by giving away mementos, experiences and their own time in exchange for money.

Signed race bibs and equipment, snowboard and diving lessons, personal phone calls, hand-knitted tuques, face-to-face meetings and social media "shoutouts" are on offer.

The website Pursuit — designed and operated by a pair of former athletes — is the platform for this exchange.

The website blends elements of online shopping for unique items or experiences. Each athlete's story is told in video and print.

They state their financial goal and why they need the money. Each athlete's financial campaign has a 60-day limit.

Canadian biathlete Megan Imrie is raising money for Olympic training through a crowd-sourcing website called Pursuit. MARTIN ROSE/BONGARTS/GETTY IMAGES Imrie of Falcon Lake, Man., was well on her way to her goal of $10,000 with over a month to go.

The athletes on Pursuit offer items and access to their lives on a scale reflecting the size of the donation.

So for a $20 donation, Imrie will send e-mail postcards during training and competition next season.

A package of a personal telephone call, an autographed card and regular e-mail updates goes for $100.

For $1,000, Imrie will package a pair of signed skis, bindings and a race bib together for the donor.

Imrie's family operates Falcon Beach Ranch, so her big-ticket offering is a two-night stay at the resort for a $5,000 donation.

"People are holding onto the money more these days," Imrie says. "They want something back and it has to be creative."

Perfect Riders dig the long ball in T.O.

CFL. Durant shreds Argos defence with help from RB Sheets to stretch streak to 3-0

Darian Durant threw three touchdown passes, including two long ones to Taj Smith, to lead the Saskatchewan Roughriders past the Toronto Argonauts 39-28 on Thursday night.

Durant cemented the win before a disappointing Rogers Centre gathering of 18,211 with a 70-yard TD strike to Smith at 6:51 of the third quarter to put Saskatchewan (3-0) comfortably ahead 29-14. Durant also found a wide-open Smith on a 61-yard touchdown pass in the opening half.

Durant finished 14-of-19 passing for 245 yards before suffering a foot injury and being replaced by Drew Willy with 9:52 remaining. But running back Kory Sheets anchored the victory, surpassing the 100-yard rushing plateau for the third consecutive contest with 178 yards and two TDs.

Sheets, who had three 100-yard games last year, has rushed for career-highs in the first three weeks of the season.

Toronto (1-2) made it interesting early in the fourth when Ricky Ray hit Chad Kackert on a 48-yard touchdown pass to cut its deficit to 32-21. But the defending Grey Cup champions still suffered their second straight loss despite Ray finishing 27-of-37 passing for 334 yards and two TDs.

Saskatchewan, the CFL's lone undefeated team, has been dominant at Rogers Centre, winning seven of its last eight games there and eight-of-11 overall against the Argos. The Riders also scored more than 30 points for the third straight game.

Rob Bagg had Saskatchewan's other touchdown. Chris Milo added the converts and a field goal while Ricky Schmitt booted a single.

Andre Durie and Zach Collaros scored Toronto's other touchdowns. Noel Prefontaine kicked the converts, two field goals and a single.

Jeter makes his return to Yankees

Derek Jeter was back, and the New York Yankees felt a whole lot better.

At least until he needed to make an early exit.

The Yankees captain singled on his first pitch of the season, then was pulled for a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning with a tight right quadriceps in an 8-4 victory Thursday over the Kansas City Royals.

"It's just stiff," he said. "We'll find out tomorrow."

Jeter scored a run and went 1-for-4 with an RBI groundout as the designated hitter in his return from a nine-month layoff from a broken ankle.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

People you do business with today may not be talkative but from the look in their eyes and the way they position themselves, you will know what they are thinking. You read body language so well.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

It's good to be open-minded but that does not mean you can allow people with silly theories to waste your time. The Sun in Cancer promotes broader thinking but some thinking is too outrageous to take seriously.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

No matter how vulnerable you may feel at the moment, you need to be around people because it is only through personal contact that you can rise above this negative phase.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Make a point of being calm today because what happens over the weekend will try your patience to the limit.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You are desperate to be on the move and will be impatient with people who think or act too slowly. Your journey will be a lot more pleasant if you relax and stop looking at your watch so often. Time doesn't matter.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

If you are confused about something, you must speak up. There is nothing wrong in admitting that you don't "get" it and it's unlikely you are the only one. You will be doing people a favour. SALLY BROMPTON
